

CHILD SUFFERING BY NEGRO'S ATTACK

Boy of Fourteen Sought as Assailant of Young Girl.

FATHER SCARES SUSPECT AWAY

Police Say Affair May Have Been Fight Over Blackberries She Had Gathered.

While Sarah Maroney, a pretty fourteen-year-old girl, bruised and suffering from the shock of an attack upon her by a negro boy last night, remains secluded in her home, 156 N street southeast today, neighbors, the police force, and several detectives are searching for the boy she claims as her assailant. The police became convinced this afternoon that the boy left the city last night upon a boat and is now somewhere in Maryland with relatives.

Miss Maroney, who is scarcely more than a child, tells a thrilling story of the way in which she was approached, thrown down and choked by a negro living in the neighborhood, while she was engaged late yesterday afternoon in picking blackberries in the enclosed Government Property Yards, a block from her home. Upon a nearby fence, sat her younger brother and sister, who were too small to climb over, and yet, who realizing their sister's danger, spread the alarm as soon as the boy laid hands upon her.

Father Scares Boy Away.

A moment later Mr. Maroney and Thomas E. Gardner, of 1209 New Jersey avenue southeast, ran to the aid of the screaming girl, and the negro boy, warned of their approach, jumped the fence and escaped. As news of the attack from the Fifth precinct arrived a detail was sent to the home of Louie Campbell of 1010 First street southeast, said by the girl to be her assailant. His mother reported him absent.

The boy has not returned to his home today, although it is explained that this is nothing unusual as he frequently remains away several days at a time. Captain Matthews of the Fifth precinct said this morning that Campbell's father had promised to deliver him to the authorities when he returned.

Fight Over Blackberries.

The Maroney girl suffered no injuries beyond slight bruises about the arms, and fright. Some doubt was expressed in police circles today as to the seriousness of the boy's intention. Captain Matthews said that another child who had watched the affair from a short distance had said today that what was reported to be an attempted attack was really a fight over a lot of blackberries that the Maroney child had gathered.

"My girl's strength saved her from being more roughly handled," said Mrs. Maroney this morning. "She is quite strong for her age and the negro, who weighs considerably more, was unable to handle her as he might a less robust child. She is suffering considerably from the shock today, and has been unable to eat or sleep to any extent since the occurrence. I trust that her assailant will be apprehended, as it will be an object lesson to a number of rather rough characters in this neighborhood."

V. P. C. U. DELEGATES NOW SIGHTSEEING

Convention Ends With Mass Meeting in Church of Our Father.

With the mass meeting last night in the Church of Our Father the Young People's Christian Union formally closed its convention. Many delegates remained over, however, for a few days to do a little sightseeing.

A trip to Mt. Vernon was made this morning, the visitors leaving Washington at 9:30 o'clock. Short trips were made to Alexandria for a visit to Christ Church and to Arlington. One hundred members of the New England delegation will go to Baltimore at 4 o'clock this afternoon, and there take a steamer for Norfolk. Others will leave Washington at 7 o'clock tonight for Norfolk, and the two delegations will meet tomorrow morning and spend the day at Old Point Comfort, Norfolk, and Newport News. Another day will be spent in sightseeing Wednesday and the delegates will then leave for their homes.

President Childs presided at the mass meeting last night and addressed the delegates by the Rev. G. I. Keim, the Rev. E. M. Powers, and the Rev. Frank Oliver. Hall, of the Young People's Christian Union, presided at the mass meeting conducted at 11 o'clock yesterday morning by the Rev. John Van Schalk, Jr., pastor of the Church of Our Father. When a special sermon was preached by the Rev. John Coleman Adams, of Connecticut.

HOHENLOHE WINS STEAMSHIP FIGHT

HAMBURG, July 6.—The long and bitter fight between Hohenlohe and Prince Christian of Prussia for the control of the German Levant Steamship Company ended today in a victory for Hohenlohe.

Ballin had been trying to buy up enough shares of the company to gain control, with the ultimate purpose of consolidating the company with the Hamburg-American line. Financiers, however, failed to support Ballin in his scheme, and the control remains with Hohenlohe. Ballin announced today that he would sell out and organize a rival company to compete with the Levant. The Hamburg-American is also fighting the Levant in the Eastern routes, where hitherto the company had no competition.

Blue-Blooded Curiosity Boils Around Presidential Candidate

By JAMES HAY, JR.

HOT SPRINGS, Va., July 6.—William Howard Taft is regarded here with a great, although a well-bred, curiosity. It goes without saying that the curiosity is thoroughly well-bred. This is a resort where only the aristocratic set is seen. It is the resorting place of the bluest blood in the South and other parts of this land.

Of course there are a few whose blood is not so dark as that of others, but American civilization has evolved a plan whereby the long green can impart to the blood of any one an indigo hue which will not fade so long as the money lasts. Therefore, all persons here are aristocrats, and equally therefore, their curiosity is well-bred.

It has been denied as atrociously false that no one in the dining room the morning after Taft's arrival drank coffee. This rumor was started because it was said that everybody drank water so as to be able to look through the glasses at the Secretary and at the guests not staying at him in a vulgar manner. Inquiry has developed the fact that one man did drink coffee. He was a Democrat.

Illustrates Curiosity. But this instance, whether it be true or not, serves as an illustration of the well-bred curiosity that has been evinced here every day concerning the candidate and his movements.

He is watched, but it is done in the most approved manner. The men puff out big clouds of smoke, and then peer through it at him under the belief that he can not see through the haze as well as they.

At the next table a man who has read that Taft is a conservative and the savior of business takes a drink of water, tilting the glass so high that he can look under it and distinguish the Taft features as clearly as if he stood under an arc light.

From Meal to Meal.

Thus it goes until Mr. Taft has run through the gamut of well-bred curiosity to his seat at his table, and thus it goes until the meal is over. But there is nothing obtrusive about it. It is not good form to obtrude. This privilege is reserved for mad dogs and bad boys.

When Mr. Taft enters the dining room, a man at the first table mutters: "Here comes the candidate."

Stabs His Chop.

Then he stabs a chop viciously, wrestles with it, puts his head and body at every angle known to mathematics, and, in the course of the encounter with the thin veil of lace fans. But every flutter of excitement is suppressed, for it is not well-bred to flutter. Fluttering is indulged in only by the common rabble and birds.

Find Out Truth.

Incidentally, his coming here has enabled the chroniclers to find out the truth about certain matters connected with blue blood and aristocracy. For instance, it has been said that Southern aristocrats do not bid but tap their heels on the tombs of their ancestors and swell up because their forebears had good epiphanies. This is not true at Hot Springs.

Up here the aristocrats—whether the aristocracy comes from long familiarity with the family tree or from close connection with a bank vault—tap their heels on the tombs of their ancestors and swell up because their forebears had good epiphanies. This is not true at Hot Springs.

Will Remember Springs.

When the Republican candidate for the Presidency leaves here September 1 and goes out among the garish folk who let their curiosity run away with them, he will remember this place with gratitude and longing. Well-bred curiosity is a great thing for a candidate. Also, it is a novel thing for him to find a place where the people, even if they are as curious as the innocent Mr. W., are as silent and unobtrusive as Frank H. Hitchcock.

And yet, it is incredible, it is miraculous, it is superhuman how much these people with the well-bred curiosity know about Mr. Taft and his policies. Some day they will get reckless and tell it.

Early Police Court Session Finds Plenty of Work Waiting

As the morning sun rose above the eastern hills and smiled in summer radiance upon our beautiful city this morning he got a shock that made him wobble. The Police Court had beaten him to it. They were the first up. And the morning sun got quite aggravated and proceeded to show his spite by trying to give everybody heat prostration.

Under the valiant leadership of Judge George C. Aukam, who is temporarily relieving Judge Muldowney, the District branch of the court gathered at 8 o'clock this morning. This is establishing precedent with a vengeance. No wonder the summer sun was shocked and grieved.

Some time ago Judge Kimball suggested that his court meet at 9 o'clock and thereby caused an electric chill to chase through the nervous systems of his subordinates. But 8 o'clock, thirty minutes after 7:30 and an hour and a half ahead of schedule time—this was an innovation with a regular whoop on the end of it.

Business for Early Session.

Nevertheless, it was a success. There were many to be tried, for the heat had caused many a man to seek artificial methods to forget the temperature. Had the court been called as usual there would have been a moist, wilted, and short-tempered aggregation of officials at noon time. But by the 8 o'clock session the matters of state were all disposed of before 10 o'clock and everybody, save an occasional prisoner or so, was calm, cool, and collected.

Abraham Johnson Lee was the principal objector to the new procedure. But then Abraham has an inherent objection to police courts in general, so his plaintive wail does not carry the weight it might under other circumstances. Abraham was led to the bar this morning because he had to be dragged from a bar Saturday night. Also because he had determined to ascertain by means of personal research just what was inside of a "gen'an fren" of his.

Caller for Three Years.

Abraham was among the first to be led up. He glanced around and shed a pearly tear.

"Judge," said he in a voice trembling with emotion, "Ah's been comin' to dah yah co'te for nigh on free years. And dis is de fir'st time Ah done been brung up befo' breakfas'."

After sentence was passed Abraham wandered away still softly sobbing. "Free years, am' dis is de fir'st time Ah was evah tried befo' breakfas'."

There were twenty-nine prisoners in the dock, and a number out on collateral, and Judge Aukam displayed his ability to dispose of the cases with rapidity and fairness.

By the time the United States branch of the court was called to order a majority of the cases in the District branch had been disposed of, and a few minutes later the court was adjourned. There were only three prisoners in the dock in Judge Kimball's court, and it was not until after 1 o'clock that all of the cases had been tried.

With the exception of a few growls from habitual kickers, Judge Aukam's action has met with general favor among those who have business before the court.

PANTHER'S VICTIM FOUND.

RHINELANDER, Wis., July 6.—The partly devoured body of a man was found today in the woods near Brantwood. There was nothing on his clothing to identify him. It is thought he was killed by a panther that has been seen in this neighborhood recently. The man was apparently a woodsman. Fifty-five dollars was found in his pocket.

DEBRIS OF FOURTH BEING TAKEN AWAY

Thirty White Wings Tackle Exploded Crackers and Spent Rockets.

Long before the American citizen was Saturday so strenuously celebrated his independence was on his way to his place of business this morning, thirty white wings under the direction of John T. Twohey, superintendent of street cleaning, began to remove from the streets and avenues the debris of the celebration.

Not in years has there been in Washington such enthusiasm as was manifested by its residents on Saturday. The opening of the new Municipal Building on the Fourth of July was a cause for unusual rejoicing and the explosion of many fireworks.

It is estimated that the amount of charred firecrackers, pin-wheels, roman candles, etc., is greater by 25 per cent than ever before. To remove these evidences of patriotism will cost the District approximately $2,000, but the Commissioners are unanimous in the opinion that it is money well spent.

The workmen today directed their attention to the central section of the city which Superintendent Twohey promised should be thoroughly cleaned by tonight. Tomorrow they will clean up the residential and suburban sections and by Wednesday Washington will again be a "City Beautiful."

The White Lot, which was the scene of the fireworks display will be restored to its original appearance by workmen under the direction of Colonel Bromwell, superintendent of public buildings and grounds.
